This is the process to download the Prostate cancer is the most commonly diagnosed malignancy in men and the second leading cause of cancer deaths in men in the United States. Most patients with prostate cancer die of metastatic disease, and therefore, there is a critical need for the development of new approaches for the treatment of this disease. The low-affinity Fc receptor (Fc $\gamma$ R) is highly expressed on the surface of malignant prostate cells. Human IgG1 antibodies that bind specifically to Fc $\gamma$ R1 bind to Fc $\gamma$ R-expressing cancer cells and block interactions between these cells and cytokines, growth factors, and immuno-regulatory proteins. The interaction of IgG with Fc $\gamma$ R has several immune-modulatory effects, including the inhibition of cytokine-mediated cancer cell growth in vitro and in vivo. More importantly, the use of Fc $\gamma$ R-specific antibodies that block the interaction of Fc $\gamma$ R with its ligand proteins has resulted in the regression of some established malignancies in pre-clinical models, and safety and tolerability of these antibodies have been demonstrated in human subjects. The overall goal of this study is to test the hypothesis that anti-Fc $\gamma$ R antibodies can be used as radio-sensitizing agents to treat prostate cancer, and can be combined with radiation to synergistically enhance radio-sensitivity in vivo. We will employ an orthotopic model of prostate cancer in which prostate tumors develop in the mouse prostate gland without the need for immunosuppression, to perform in vivo imaging of tumor growth and treatment with radiolabeled anti-Fc $\gamma$ R antibody. We will use this model to determine the radiation dose and duration that are required to completely eradicate prostate tumors. We will then test whether radio-sensitization can be achieved by co-administration
