i dont think the link below includes it, but you can put your videos into a timeline format as well. save your movie as a timeline instead of as a single clip. select the clips from the timeline that you want to use and add them into the main movie. you can then choose to animate them by clicking "animate" and selecting the parts of the sequence you want to move (the white house for example). in composer, you can make a movie from several clips selected by clicking "play", which is in the bottom left part of the screen. here you just have to select the clips you want to use and set the in and out points. from there, just click "animate". it makes it a lot easier to animate your movie. in after effects, you have to start a new movie in the event editor, where you can import your clips, then you can animate by clicking the animate button and choosing the parts of the clip sequence you want to animate. as an example, here is my wedding video: to create a pic app, i bought a package that included the pic app and the software to assemble the app to the a5 and a6 snap cards. you also need a selection of cards. i bought the a5 and a6 snaps for about $45 and a selection of cards for about $25 (i bought the white ones). i recommend you print out your own instructions and leave the ones in the demo program. it takes a lot of time to put together, but it is a lot easier than making the pic app all by yourself. 5ec8ef588b
